Hawkinsville Dispatch: Mr. A. J. Pound spent a day or two in Hawkinsville last week on his return from Wilcox county, where he had been to inspect the cotton crop. On Saturday morning a drove of upward of one hundred were driven through Hawkinsville. Mr. Pound selected the route through Hartsfield county, but the farmers along the route were willing for Mr. Pound to drive his stock through their county.

The trip took him about four hours. The route is forty-six miles, and only one night is passed on the trip. The steers were from four to five years old, and the drivers, from twelve to twenty dollars per head. The average weight was about 270 pounds. The past winter was not unusually hard, and the steers are said to be in good order.

After his home return, Mr. Pound, who has now finished recitations, they begin their final examinations to-day. These completed, they will go to Atlanta, where they will remain until the end of the term. They are of course glad that studies are over, but this old college, the scene of one, two, three or four years of comparative idleness, with the pleasure of college life, have still an attraction for them, and a feeling of thoughtfulness seems to come over them. "One of our colleagues speaks of taking their final exam in the Masonic temple for the benefit of the confederate home in Richmond."

Business in Augusta is a no-faltering, but the farmers along the route were willing for Mr. Pound to drive his stock through their county.

The birds, all liberated as stated to-morrow morning if the weather is fair, Mr. Peagram has appointed the following committee of starters who are to meet at the top of the hill at 7:30 a.m. to note the minute of the departure of the birds: H. C. Eeles, H. H. Hill, D. G. Maxwell, Wade Harris, J. S. Mason and George H. King. Mr. Starr will telegraph back the arrival home of the birds. The little flyers are being cared for by Mr. Peagram and were yesterday visited by a large party who were anxious to see them. They are handsome birds and considerable interest will be manifested by our people in their journey.

To Hang on the 18th.

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 30.—[Special.]—Sam Williams, a Negro, was today sentenced at Waycross to be hanged for a flight of 500 miles back to their homes, made in a single night. He had accepted the trust, received by express a basket containing eighteen pigeons, all of which will be liberated in the morning between 4:30 and 5 o'clock, from the roof of the Central hotel. The pigeons had six each to Messrs. R. E. Johnson, Dr. W. E. Johnston, and Dr. J. W. Johnston of Ellijay. They are in size somewhat larger than our ordinary pigeons and blue in color. On their wings they bear the marks of their owners, made with rubber stamps, beside the name of the race, station, and date.

The greater part of the pigeons had been hatched in September and November of last year. The arrival of the birds home is attended to by Mr. E. S. Starr, who finds out how each loft is located in regard to the telegraph office, and allows each a certain time according to his arrival.

When his flight is taken, he is caught, the private mark on his wing feathers is found and a message giving it is hurried off to the telegraph office. The Story of a Rattler and a Prominent Citizen of Berrien.

From the Berrien, Ga., News.

On last Friday, at 2:45 p.m., Messrs. R. Q. Houston, Dr. J. Johnson, George McMillan and W. K. Roberts were on a deer hunt in the Alapaha river swamp, about three miles from town. After taking their respective "stands" Mr. Houston went below about three miles to the river. The two men ran away, while the spectators who thought the lads were not in real earnest, were laughing. They were soon heard to fall, and were found to be dead. They were buried in the same grave, where Dr. F. H. Cox attended them. About eighteen years ago a man named John Farmer, became engaged in a row, and was stoned to death. He was universally esteemed and loved, and died in his bed, instantaneously.

Mr. John Farmer, of Ellijay, was buried in the cemetery of the First Baptist church, and the services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Tandy, who was a son of the deceased.

INDICATIONS FOR the South Atlantic states, fair weather, east winds, slightly warmer.

LEGISLATION and business have come to a standstill, awaiting the result of the Chicago convention. The trains leading into the city of grain are filled with anxious politicians.

FELIX WARD is tired of being made the scapegoat for the sins of others, and declares that General Grant had an equal responsibility with himself in the financial schemes of Grant & Ward.

EX-ALLEGED-PRESIDENT HAYES made a speech yesterday in Springfield, Ohio, in which he regretted that there were a million voters in the south who could neither read nor write. They can do well enough to be convinced that Mr. Hayes reached the presidency through force and fraud.

The simultaneous blowing up of three prominent buildings in London last night tests the determination of the Rossou element of Irish politics. The best thing for a man to do when he has a burning coal in his hands is to drop it; an example which England might find it good policy to pursue in regard to Ireland.

THE GRANTS AND THEIR BUNKO OPERATIONS.

There is no longer any doubt or mystery in regard to the operations by which Ward and Fish, acting together and separately, managed to rob their friends and acquaintances of an amount which is known to reach fourteen millions of dollars, and which may turn out to reach much more. There was doubt, as well as mystery when the collapse came, for it was almost impossible for the honest mind to conceive how such a monstrous swindle had been arranged and engineered so successfully. General Grant has a character, apart from his personality, a character which connects him even in the minds of those who might be supposed to be his enemies, with the national name and fame, and it was the cue of the newspapers of all classes and parties to exonerate him from all complicity with the Fish and Ward swindles, though such exonerations heightened the doubt and deepened the mystery.

But there is no longer either doubt or mystery. Both have been cleared up by the publication of the correspondence between General Grant and Fish, and the impartial mind must admit that the complicity of the one is as criminal as that of the other. There can be no escape from such a conclusion. It should be borne in mind that for two years or more the swindling operations of the firm were based on the assumption that the influence of General Grant was such as to give to his firm a monopoly of highly profitable government contracts in hay and oats. When the collapse came, it was claimed in behalf of the Grants that they knew nothing whatever of these alleged government contracts, and that therefore they were innocent of complicity in any transaction or swindle which had the alleged contracts for its basis.

The arrest of Fish has cleared the atmosphere, so to speak, and it is made perfectly clear that General Grant did know of the use that was made of the firm's pretensions concerning government contracts. Driven to the wall, Fish shows that he did not enter into intimate relations with the firm of Grant & Ward without making proper inquiries. These inquiries were addressed to Grant himself. Fish wrote to Grant in July, 1882:

It is necessary that the credit of G. & W. should deservedly stand very high. These inquiries I send you, and I trust you will give it, are for no other purpose than to raise money for the payment of grain, etc., purchased to fill the government contracts. Under the circumstances, my dear general, you will see that it is of the most vital importance, to me particularly, that the credit of the firm shall always be unimpaired and unimpaired. I will be happy to meet you at almost any time you may name to talk these matters over.

Fish, it will be observed, calls Grant's attention to the grain contracts in the most explicit manner. As a member of the firm, and interested in its success, Grant could have no doubt of the methods employed to raise money. Fish was an inholder of the firm's notes to the extent of $200,000, hence, his letter. Grant's reply is dated July 6, 1882. He wrote:

On my arrival in the city this a. m. I find your letter of yesterday with a letter from Thomas L. James, president of the Lincoln national bank, and copy of yours to the latter. Your understanding in regard to our liabilities in the firm of Grant & Ward are the same as mine. If you desire it I am entirely willing that the advertisement of the firm shall be so changed as to express this. Not having been in the city for more than a week, I have a large accumulated mail to look over, and some business to transact to meet, so that I may not be able to get down to see you to-day. But I will go before 6 o'clock.

Very truly yours,
U. S. GRANT.

There is not a word here about the grants, nor anything to show that Grant was surprised at the mention of contracts that had no existence, save in the imagination of the firm. The real answer to Fish's letter, however, was sent from the office of the firm the same day, and was as follows:

My dear Mr. Fish.—In response to the matter of discounts kindly made to you by the partners of Grant & Ward, I wish to say that I think the investments are safe, and I am willing that Mr. Ward should derive what profit he can for the firm that is due to my name and influence may bring.

Yours very truly,
U. S. GRANT.

This letter lets in a flood of 12th on the swindle, and shows that if any inhood of the great bunko firm, who has hitherto been to do it, succeded in a business-like way. He made all proper inquiries. He called Grant's attention, in the most explicit manner, to the fact that the firm was raising enormous sums of money on government grain contracts, and he could do no more than this. The letters of General Grant were not only a tacit admission of the existence of these contracts, but they went further and assured Fish that Ward was authorized to derive for the firm what profit he might from the free use of Grant's name and influence. What could be more explicit and satisfactory than this? It does not follow that Fish is an honest man, for he must have known later that the grain contracts were part and parcel of an immense swindling scheme; but he is any less honest than General Grant? It is pitiful indeed that a great name should be dragged in the mire, but those who have great names should take care of them. In the light of facts, the public must conclude that General Grant was fully aware of the swindle.

ELECTIONS BY THE HOUSE.

It is now settled that there are to be three presidential candidates. General Butler, bearing the indorsements of the greenback and labor-reform organizations, is the third candidate in popular estimation, and the first actually in the field. It does not matter, of course, whether there are three or twenty-three candidates, if two get all the electoral votes; but if the third man, for example, receives some votes, and neither of the two leading candidates receives 201 electoral votes the election then goes to the house of representatives, where the vote would be cast by states. Fortunately the democrats control twenty-one delegations out of the thirty-eight in the house. If the election is transferred to the house, the democrats are secure.

But will there be an election by the house? It is not impossible. Butler's friends claim that it will carry Michigan and Massachusetts. If he does, the republican candidate for president absolutely cannot secure 201 electoral votes; but if the third man, for example, receives some votes, and neither of the two leading candidates receives 201 electoral votes the election then goes to the house of representatives, where the vote would be cast by states. Fortunately the democrats control twenty-one delegations out of the thirty-eight in the house. If the election is transferred to the house, the democrats are secure.

Ir is said that at one time during his examination, Fish exhibited confusion. We may be sure, however, that neither shame nor repentance controlled his mind. Men who engage in the business of robbing their friends and partners are not apt to be troubled with remorse.

It is understood that Bliss made more money out of the star-route prosecutions than the government paid him. Dorsey, for instance, was told that he would be "let go" on the payment of $30,000.

CAPTAIN ROBERT W. ANDREWS, aged ninety-three, has just reached Washington, D. C., on his long tramp from Sunter, S. C., to Boston, where he goes to visit a son. The captain walks twenty-five miles a day and carries seventeen pounds of luggage. He served in the war of 1812 and also in the late war. He has ten children living. The aged pedestrian enjoys fine health. He has never used tobacco but takes a dram when he thinks he needs it. However, he is particular about the quality of his liquor, and prefers going without it, saving his money. He tramped over the same ground seventy-one years ago and says that he notices some changes. While in Washington the old man called on President Arthur. He has shaken hands with every president since Washington.

Ir George Bliss could be made to confess, Editor Dana would have fewer allusions to our "honest president."

EVERY robber in Wall street, it appears, was a partner of General Grant's bunko firm. They were all partners and they all got it.

Ex-GOVERNOR BENJAMIN, of Massachusetts, declares that he is twenty years old as a greenbacker. In other words, he has grown gray in the business.

BEN BUTLER now claims to be the worst greenbacker this country has ever seen.

SILVER coin bangles are the latest craze among the eastern girls. It is the ambition of every girl to wear one of these silver circles with its little row of single coins, each piece bearing the monogram of its donor. One young lady comes to the front with fifty-two bangles, costing $84.45, but as the expense was shared among fifty-two gentlemen it didn't amount to much for any one person. It is estimated that in New York and Brooklyn there are 60,000 girls who wear bangles with 180,000 cent pieces and 100,000 dimes on them, besides other coins.

DO YOU suppose that any genuine independent republican could be induced to vote for a party which is engaged in reforming republican rascality? If you think so, you are not acquainted with our friends, the independents.

THE mention of Edmunds as a possible republican candidate has not made him any more sociable. He still goes off by himself when he wants to take a toddy.

The News Boys Make a Race to Decatur and Back Yesterday.

The Feast in Commemoration of the Revelation on Mo. Sabbath. The Synagogue Beautifully Decorated and With Evergreens and Flowers
in Honor of the Rabbi, Etc. Etc.

The Jewish synagogue at the corner of Garrett and Forsyth streets was the scene of an interestingly interesting service yesterday when the ceremonies of Pentecost or Feast of Weeks were observed.

This interesting feast is observed in commemoration of the revelations on Mt. Sinai and in addition to the usual services conducted by Rabbis Jacobson yesterday, a class of eleven boys and girls was confirmed.

The synagogue was elaborately and beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers.
Three arches were in front of the pulpit, the center one being over the pulpit's desk. Under the arches were the words:

"GOD IS LOVE."

All the altar furniture was decorated and a bank of evergreens and magnolias was put at the foot of the reader's desk.

The following ladies and gentlemen com-
miced the service:

Mrs. Clark, soprano.
Miss Clegg Hobson, alto.
Mr. M. J. Goldsmith, tenor.
Mr. W. L. Livley, bass.
Prof. E. H. Kruger, organist.

Frankly at nine o'clock the services began,
Rabbi Jacobson officiating in his usual impressive and interesting manner.

The usual services occupied an hour or so,
and preceded the confirmation.

When the confirmation—the interesting side-driven rabbi having concluded the service, arose and stated that there were certain young gentlemen who made it a privilege to have the church while the sermon was being preached on the ground that they could not understand Hebrew. He said if there were any such present he hoped they would leave then, and before they did so he said:
"The sermon is in the common language," proceeded

the rabbi, his voice rising with enthusiasm,
as he whistled away many pleasant moments in the mountain gorges. His dog which has been his companion for years, trotted behind the wagon when Mr. Bird started his team away from Atlanta.

In due course of time Mr. Bird reached the mountains, and for several days tramped
through them, often bearing his load over his shoulders, his team being unable to travel through the deep gullies and narrow passes. The weather was very bad, and the men were often compelled to stop and wait for the teams to pass, and the animals would stand still, and the men had to wait for hours.

At last, however, the team reached the summit, and the men were greatly relieved when they saw the valley below, and the team moved on with great alacrity. The men were soon in the valley, and the team was soon moving again, and the men were soon in the valley, and the team was soon moving again, and the men were soon in the valley, and the team was soon moving again,
